COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course is designed for three distinct audiences - law students, MA and PhD economics students and undergraduate economics majors. The lectures focus on the economic analysis of law. The readings draw heavily from both the traditional textbooks as well as from selected readings in the economics literature.

Law and economics has achieved prominence if not dominance within most of the legal academic world and certainly in the “high-brow” legal academic world. There is good reason for this. It provides an extremely compelling paradigm from which to understand the law. It provides normative and positive bases from which to evaluate the law and to suggest its reform.

The domain of law and economics has expanded greatly over the past twenty years from its origins in economic efficiency and antitrust law to the entire spectrum of the law curriculum. One of its earlier expansions was in what one might call the first year curriculum: contracts, torts, property, and procedure. We're going to cover most of this. The concepts of a competitive general equilibrium, welfare optimality (including Pareto and Kaldor – Hicks efficiency), game theory and the problems posed by market failure via externalities, monopolies and public goods are emphasized.

AVERAGE MINIMUM AMOUNT OF INDEPENDENT, OUT-OF-CLASS, LEARNING EXPECTED PER WEEK:

We have a 15-week semester, including exam week, and this is a 3-credit course. According to university policy, over these 15 weeks for our 3-credit hour course you should average a minimum of 5 hours of independent learning per week in addition to the 2.5 hours per week of direct instruction. The actual amount of studying required depends on many factors including your background preparation, your study skills, and your target grade. Success in this class in particular is highly likely to require substantially more independent learning. More information about GW's credit hour policy can be found in the university bulletin: <http://bulletin.gwu.edu/university-regulations/>.

REQUIRED TEXT:

Cooter, Robert and Thomas Ulen. Law and Economics. Addison Wesley – 6th Edition. (2012). Hereinafter (CU).

Posner, Judge Richard A. Economic Analysis of Law. 9th ed. Aspen Case Book Series. Hereinafter (Judge P).

Shavell, Steven. Foundations of Economic Analysis of Law. Harvard University Press. (2004). Hereinafter (S).

REQUIREMENTS FOR THE COURSE:

For graduate students in Economics and Law the grade for this course is based on a semester long term paper (40%) and a take home final exam (60%). For undergraduate students, the paper can be (or not) substituted for a take home mid-term exam (40%).

For those taking the mid-term exam it will be distributed on 3/8/2017. The final exam will be distributed on 5/8/2017. You have 48 hours to complete the exams and turn them in as an attachment in an email to me. The final paper has to be turned in on (or before) 5/12/2017.

READINGS AND LECTURE LIST:

The dates to the right represent the dates when the material will be discussed in class. The dates on the syllabus are planned presentation dates. We may be able to speed up or slow down depending on the complexity of the topic.
